Mock Interviewers Fast Facts

Young Entrepreneurs Business Week is an annual week long immersion program on a college campus designed to empower high school students by teaching the basics of business fundamentals and financial literacy, through an innovative, fun and interactive mentoring environment. Our Motto is “Real World Experience, Life Changing Results™.”

The Week

During the week the students live on campus in the dorms and if they choose to come with a friend, have the option of choosing their roommate. During the week, students form “companies,” each assigned a business advisor (from the business community) serving as a coach and mentor for the entire week. Companies elect their CEO, CMO, COO and CFO and as a company learn by hearing outstanding guest speakers, participating in a variety of workshops, games and simulations. Throughout the week the students will compete in simulation called BizSim, making decisions over a 12 “quarter” timeframe. As a company they will create a logo and a new product or service. At the end of the week, each company will formally present to a panel of judges. Their presentations will detail the result of their 8 quarters of decisions, as well as a business plan that they developed for their new product or service.

Did I Get the Job?

The Mock Interviewer

Mock Interviewers will arrive early for a briefing on the format of the interviews and how they are to interview the students. They will be given a sample questions and asked to decide which student would most likely get the job. This experience is one we hope that students will walk away from that much better prepared for the “real deal.” We ask that interviews come with a coach’s mentality, fair but tough, challenging the students to recognize where they did well and how they could have improved.
